

WOMAN'S CLUB NOTES.

Marigolds.

Transfixed by some familiar glow,
Upon the pavement's crowded space
I sat, with lingering foot and slow,
As though I saw a well known face.
A blending of deep, rich maroon,
Orange, and yellow, fold on fold,
Amid the florist's window blooms,
A mass of velvet marigold.

I mind me, when a child, I grew
Within my mother's garden plot,
And all the long, bright summer through
I thrived, although I loved it not.
But now, the memories it brings
Of those dear hands, that gave it care,
A host of sweet forgotten things
Cluster about, and make it fair.

The dainty Boston beauty wreathed
Her drooping spray, beside the wall,
And double damask roses breathed
Delicious fragrance over all.
And southern wood, and fast sweet peas,
Were there within her garden fold,
But still she treasured more than these
The dear, old-fashioned marigold.

How often at the evening time,
Having transgressed the well known
rule,
And pale, faint stars began to shine,
Ere I came tottering home from school,
That heavy, pungent odor bore
A deep foreboding to my soul.
The stern reproach which was in store
Was whispered by the marigold.

Ah! mother dear, if I could come
Confessing failings, great and small,
And find you waiting me at home
When evening shades begin to fall,
How would I greet with heart and eye,
And joy, and tenderness untold,
That which now speaks of heavy fate,
Your life, long friend, the marigold.

CLARA TREADWAY WEIR.
Given at the Ladies' Literary Club, Salt
Lake City, Utah, March 14, 1902.

The Ladies' Literary Club.

A programme of original work was the order of the afternoon on Friday at the Ladies' Literary club. Mrs. A. J. Gorham was the chairman, of the day, and a most enjoyable programme had been prepared. The first number was by Mrs. Thomas Weir, and consisted of "Incidents of Travel—Humorous and Pathetic." Mrs. Weir read two dainty little gems of her own in which "are no incidents of travel, and a number of clever little anecdotes relating to personal experiences. The charm of originality was the special delight in all her readings.

Mrs. L. M. Bailey followed with the reading of a finely written short story by Miss Jacobs, whose nom de plume is Amelia Elliott. The story was published in the New York Evening Post, and showed remarkable talent in a writer so young as the girl who sat in the audience and listened to its rendering.

Some beautiful little bits of choice verse inspired by various themes were read by Miss A. E. Buchanan of the High school. Among the most noticeable of these were, "Under the Evergreens," "To the Willamette," "To the Columbine," "To the English Sparrow," "The Apple Tree," "The New Year," and "Easter Morn."

At the close of the reading, Mrs. Plummer sang the beautiful little gem "To the Columbine," to music of her own composing.

The special feature of the afternoon, however, was the story by Mrs. Caroline Abbott Stanley, which was read by the writer, who alone could give it the interpretation it deserved. It is called "The Buryin' of Zeb Holt," and is a story of farm life in Missouri. It is one of the best of the short stories for which Mrs. Stanley is rapidly gaining a reputation. Even a reviewer of whose could give no adequate idea of its humor, its descriptive charm or its pathos, for its was replete with all three. The programme was one to be long remembered in the literary annals of the club.

Preparations for the Biennial.

The women of the Utah delegation are looking forward anxiously to the meeting of the general Federation of Women's clubs. The home delegation will in all probability join the Kansas delegation, whose intention it is to stay in Salt Lake for at least twenty-four hours, coming in on a special Saturday evening, the 25th of April, and remaining over Sunday in the city. The plans of the Michigan delegation also allow of a special stop here, and as many of the women from that state are old friends of Salt Lake women, they will be made to meet and entertain the visitors. Several plans are proposed for this, and Mrs. Jennings, president of the Ladies' Literary club, has been appointed chairman of the entertainment committee. The local railroad offices are doing much to interest visitors in the main points here and farther on. Eastern women are particularly interested in the scenery of the west, and all information on the matters of special interest to them will be well received. The following will show what is being done in Los Angeles.

In response to urgent requests from attending visitors all over the United States for literature in regard to southern California and biennial matters, the club women of Los Angeles have issued an artistic, authentic and practical guide book describing places of interest, and how to get there, in and about Los Angeles, and are distributing the same freely. The chamber of commerce, the Pasadena board of trade, surely social clubs, civic and benefit orders as well as federated clubs are all interested in the entertainment of the club women, and have signified publicly on what days and at what hours their club houses will be open and hospitality extended to the women whose coming is so greatly anticipated.

Council of Jewish Women.

A most interesting meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday afternoon at the B. B. rooms. Aside from the regular programme, which was one of especial interest, the members enjoyed a talk on industrial matters from Mrs. Elmer B. Jones. Mrs. Jones went over the work of some of the eastern women, and showed the need of combined effort along the lines of industrial legislation in our own state. Mrs. P. D. Bickford gave an informal talk on the meeting of the G. F. W. C. in Los Angeles, and urged that the women of the Council take some active steps toward representation at that time. The programme for the afternoon included a paper by Mrs. Jacob Bamberger on "Yiddish Literature," which was very ably prepared and greatly enjoyed. Mrs. Adol. Simon, after which refreshments were served, and a pleasant social hour passed.

P. E. O.

One of the pleasantest of the meetings of this society was that held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. McMahon. The club listened with great interest and enjoyment to the paper by Mrs. H. C. Wallace on "Provincialism in the Literature of the West." Mrs. Bickford followed with an interesting resume of the work of the General Federation of Women's clubs, and made a plea for a large attendance from Utah at the biennial meeting of that organization. At the close of the formal part of the programme a guessing contest was enjoyed, in which the prizes were won by Mrs. Gorham and Miss Dukes. Refreshments were served, and a most delightful afternoon spent.

Reviewers' Club.

The meeting of the Reviewers' club was held last Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Loomis on First South street. The topic of the afternoon was a review of Gilbert Parker's "Right of Way" by Mrs. H. W. Brown. Mrs. Brown took up and discussed in a most able manner the plot of the story, and followed the motives and aims of the principal characters. At the close of the review a most interesting discussion was indulged in by all members. The club will hold its next meeting in the same place on Monday, the last day of the month.

Cleolan.

The Cleolan met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Clara M. Clawson. "The Ancient Mariner" was read and discussed by Miss Emmeline Wells, and Mrs. H. L. Culmer reviewed "Lalla Rookh." The next meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday next at the home of Mrs. Susie Miller. Mrs. Clawson will read a paper on "Modern London." The meeting will be an open one, and the topic promises to be of unusual interest.

Woman's Club.

On Tuesday, at the meeting of the Woman's club, Mrs. Elmer B. Jones read a very interesting paper on industrial conditions. The meeting was an open one, and was greatly enjoyed by a number of the friends of the members. At the next meeting, which will be Tuesday, Mrs. Taylor will treat English history. From the Great Interregnum to the Reformation.

D. A. R.

The Daughters of the American Revolution met on Thursday at the home of Mrs. Russell Tracy. Miss Maydella Hobbs gave interesting sketches from her family history, which included some of John Alden.

Club Notes.

The P. E. O. society will hold its next regular meeting with Mrs. John Reed next Saturday afternoon.

The Pan-Hellenic club will meet next Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Gustin.

The College club will meet on next Tuesday evening, March 20, at the home of Miss Mary Tibbals, 1096 Third street. Members will please notice the change in place of meeting.

Mrs. Ellen Elliott read her paper on Tolstoi before the reading circle of ladies in Perkins' addition, at the home of Mrs. Byron Cummings last Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Lowe, the president of the General Federation of Women's clubs, is planning to stop off on her way to the biennial, and accept the hospitality of the Salt Lake women.

The state executive board of the state federation will hold its next meeting on April 7, in this city.

There will be no meeting of the Ladies' Literary club until Friday, April 11, as the club holds no meeting on Good Friday.

The current events and current literature sections of the Ladies' Literary club will meet next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the club rooms. Mrs. Ellen Elliott will read a paper on Tolstoi and Mrs. Coray will give a short talk on "Tolstoi's Critical Work."

The Browning section will meet Tuesday evening with Miss Dunford, and will read the remainder of Giuseppe Capponi's "The Ring and the Book."

The Shakespeare section will meet Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the club rooms, and will begin the study of "King Lear." Mrs. Hicks will lead in the study.

The tourist section of the Ladies' Literary club will meet next Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the club rooms. Mrs. Galigher will read a paper on "Dresden," and Mrs. Frankel will present "Modern German Art." A full attendance is desired, as a new chairman is to be elected and matters pertaining to the next year's work are to be discussed.

Provo Clubs.

The Nineteenth Century club met at the home of Mrs. Searles. The papers given were "Manners and Customs in the Netherlands," Mrs. Corfman; Sports of Holland, Mrs. J. J. Nunn; Review Hans Brinkers Silver Skates, Mrs. De Moiser.

AT COST, READ HIS OFFER.

Being comparatively a stranger and little acquainted here, and desiring only to meet the people and introduce my work, I will for a limited time put in one or two fillings at about the cost of materials used for any one coming to my office.

Silver filling, worth $1.00 to $1.50, 25 cts. Gold filling, worth $2.00, 50 cts. These fillings are not made by a hired assistant, but by myself. The materials used are the best that can be bought. I am not running a dental parlor or advertising office, and never expect to. I do this only to aid me in becoming established.

IT'S A PICNIC.

When you want to economize you usually have to do it at the expense of quality. With baking powder it's different. You can save money in the original cost of a can of our Three Crown baking powder and not sacrifice the quality at all. A whole pound of excellent baking powder for only 25 cents. You are interested in the saving and are pleased with the high grade.
